Rev. S. H. Woodrow Says Chief Executive and Congress Were "Scared Into Blue Funk."

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 11.-The Rev. S. H. Woodrow, a cousin of President Wilson, criticized the passage of the Eight Hour Law in a sermon, "A Menace to Free Government," in the Pilgrim Congregational Church here yesterday. Dr. Woodrow said he spoke as a "free American citizen, in bondage neither to capitalists nor labor unions," and that the adjustment of the recent railroad situation was "enough to cause alarm to every thoughtful citizen and believer in free government."

"The most pitiable exhibition," he said, "was that of a President and said, "was that of a blue funk Congress frightened into a blue funk by the demands of a small portion of the citizenship. The question is raised whether Congress is any longer a deliberate body, or a servant of the Chief Executive, or of any man that sees to Washington with mob that goes to Washington with ciamor and threats.
